Instead, several other things are attempted during this period. I will copfess that most of us must economize with our time, but surely not to this extent. Not only do we not take advantage of moments when we could rest, but we find that we cannot rest when we wish to. How many women tell us, "I simply cannot sit still and do nothing!" They carry this thought to bed with them, and find that they cannot lie still in sleep. Rest, actual repose, is Bodily relaxation, rest and a spirit of repose, all of which are conducive to refreshing sleep, are invited by cultivating habits of meditation. We people of the West have much to learn in this respect from those ancient civilizations of the East which we condemn.
